

WIRED: Music & Technology for Girls: inspiring girls to get hands-on*FREE half-day WIRED presentations/workshops for Leeds schools June & July 2019

Yorkshire Sound Women Network is delivering the WIRED music technology education programme across Yorkshire, enabling girls and young women to develop creative music technology skills and gain confidence by learning alongside expert women music leaders.

We are offering Leeds secondary schools a free, in-school, half-day (3-hour) practical workshop in June or July 2019, delivered by experienced music educator and YSWN Associate Pam Hulme.

The workshop will combine a hands-on practical live looping session with information on sound technology careers and opportunities, plus a brief history of women in electronic music: exploring pioneers such as Daphne Oram and Imogen Heap and their achievements.

Girls will be signposted to a new 12-week WIRED music technology club for girls aged 11-18 years, running from September – December at Leeds Beckett University's Headingley campus.

The in-school workshop can cater for approximately 20 pupils – these can be mixed groups, but please bear in mind that only girls will be able to attend the subsequent music tech club sessions at Leeds Beckett University in the autumn.

Workshops will be offered on a first come, first served basis. To request a workshop, please complete and return the attached application form to Heidi Johnson at h.johnson@hud.ac.uk as soon as possible, indicating your preferred workshop dates.

There is no charge for hosting a workshop. WIRED is funded by Youth Music, Music for All and ISME, and delivered in partnerships with Leeds Beckett University and University Centre, Doncaster.
